

David Bradley
CEO, Canadian Trucking Alliance
President, Ontario Trucking Association

Canada's national newspaper, the Globe & Mail, has said that, "...the Ontario Trucking Association and the Canadian Trucking Alliance have been among the most successful lobbyists in the land."

David Bradley joined OTA in 1985 and became its president in 1991. In 1997, he was given the added responsibility of chief executive officer of the Canadian Trucking Alliance.

Before entering the trucking industry, David was a management consultant with one of the large global consulting firms based in Toronto and a financial markets analyst at a Canadian chartered bank.

He has served on numerous federal, provincial and international boards, committees and advisory groups. He has spoken to industry groups around the world and is much sought after by the media.

David did his undergraduate work in economics at the University of Toronto and earned a Master's Degree in economics from Queen's University. He is married with three children and likes reading, travel, golfing and fishing, though he is equally inept at the latter two. He also maintains an undying and irrational devotion to the Montreal Canadiens hockey club.
